With a view to continuously improving its energy performance and in order to minimize the energy impact generated by its activities, SAET has decided to implement a systematic approach to energy efficiency in its company management system, adopting a Management System of Energy (SGE) compliant with the requirements of the international standard UNI EN ISO 50001:2018.

The goal of continuously improving its energy performance in terms of consumption is to contain its energy needs by reducing costs and the environmental impact by reducing CO2 emissions into the atmosphere.

The principles on which the General Management wants to base the Energy Management System are:

- The compliance with all legislative obligations applicable to energy aspects
- The monitoring of own energy carriers and the objective measurement of own consumption
- Evaluating investments and modernization projects of its assets considering the reduction in terms of energy consumption deriving from these investments
- Evaluating the purchased products also based on their energy consumption
- Managing its own plants and main energy sources with methods aimed at reducing their energy consumption
- Designing the works created for customers by containing their energy needs
- Spreading greater awareness of virtuous behaviors and habits at all levels of the organization for a better use of energy
- Encouraging the purchase and use of renewable energy resources

In order to pursue the objectives that may derive from the guiding principles of the EnMS, the General Management makes available all the necessary resources, compatibly with budget availability.

The General Management undertakes to analyze the effectiveness of the Energy Management System at pre-established intervals on the basis of objective data.
